

Date & Time: Oct. 3 (Thu), 13:45 - 18:00

Room: Second Conference Room, University Hall A or Zoom (Hybrid)

#Additional Seminar: Oct.4 (Fri), 15:15-19:00 (In-person only)

For details: <https://sites.google.com/view/tgsw2024sla-tsukuba/>

This workshop was supported by KAKENHI(24K00081), Institutes of Humanities and Social Sciences (JINSYA), Center for Education of Global Communication (CEGLOC)

4 - 11 Second Language Acquisition Research under East-Asian Native Speakers' Context

In this session, in collaboration with researchers from Seoul National University and Peking University, we will share research on second-language learners of East Asian languages such as Japanese, Korean, and Chinese as mother tongues, and discuss what kind of empirical L2 acquisition research is needed in the future to unravel language universality and diversity from phonetic, grammatical, and pragmatic perspectives.

Program

Time	Title/Contents	Speaker
13:45 - 14:00	Second Language Acquisition Research Now and Future	Yuichi Ono (University of Tsukuba)
14:00 - 14:30	The effects of explicit imitation on the production of Seoul Korean stops	Mónica Torres-Net (Seoul National University)
14:30 - 15:00	Transfer and learnability of L2 functional structure: A comparative study by L1 Japanese and Korean learners of English	Kasumi Takahashi (University of Tsukuba)
15:00 - 15:40	Negated disjunction in native and non-native Japanese"	Tokiko Okuma (Ritsumeikan University)
16:00 - 17:00	Mora and recoverability effects in Japanese vowel devoicing: An acoustic analysis of the corpus of spontaneous Japanese	James Whang (Seoul National University)
17:00 - 18:00	Deriving pragmatic inferences by L2 speakers	Shuo Feng (Peking University)

Speakers

James Whang
Seoul National University

Shuo Feng
Peking University

Tokiko Okuma
Ritsumeikan University

Contact: Yuichi Ono (ono.yuichi.ga@u.tsukuba.ac.jp)